Greetings to all of our friends in the Northeast and beyond!

Early bird conference rates end February 5. Scroll down for complete details! Not comfortable committing to attending in person? Register for virtual-only and we'll be flexible in making changes if needed.

NECTFL 2021

April 22–24 in New York City

Registration is open!

We know that there are still many variables at play. We're keeping a careful eye on the situation and plan to make a final decision as we get closer. For now, though, we're going ahead with plans for a hybrid conference, which means that you can go ahead with plans to attend either in-person or virtually! Given the dynamic nature of the situation we're in, we will be completely flexible with registration changes, so no need to "wait and see." The conference is happening one way or the other, and we're looking forward to seeing you there!

NECTFL 2021 will be hybrid – what does that mean?

- Everyone's safety is paramount. We'll be working closely with the Hilton to ensure proper social distancing and safety in all locations. This may mean some changes to how we usually do things, but we're up to the challenge and we know that the new "hybrid" normal is going to be with us for some time to come.
- Attendees may register to attend in person or virtually. In-person attendees will have access to everything offered on-site and virtually, via our conference app. Virtual attendees will have access to all live-streamed presentations, all pre-recorded presentations, as well as all presenter materials uploaded via the conference app.
- The majority of sessions will be presented on-site and most of these presentations will also be offered asynchronously in a pre-recorded format for virtual attendees.
- A certain number of sessions during each time slot will be live-streamed and accessible to both in-person and virtual attendees. The exact schedule will be released late winter.
- Exhibits will be live on-site and virtual.
- In the event that the Hilton and/or New York City are not open or able to accommodate us, we will pivot to a fully virtual conference with a combination of live-streamed and pre-recorded sessions during the week of April 24–May 1.
- More details will come as we continue to plan. Please stay tuned and know that the conference is happening, one way or the other!

For complete registration details, to view the preliminary listing of sessions and pre-conference workshops, to apply for a scholarship, and/or to register, please visit our conference website:

Session Title: How Do I Know That They Know?

Monday, February 1 from 4 - 5:30 pm

Part 1: Formative Assessments

Formative assessment is a guiding light for teachers to adjust instructional practices to support student achievement. Bridging the gap from one level to another can be smoother, purposeful and gel with student interests. Setting learning goals and measuring progress can take place at any time, multiple times during instruction. If a student knows where they are, what they need to do in order to get to a clear target - better results can happen!

Tuesday, February 3 from 4 - 5:30 pm

Part 2: Meaningful Output

Student output is the best part of teaching a world language...ask any WL teacher! Eventually achieving higher levels of comprehension can present itself in various modes through listening, writing, reading and speaking opportunities. It might feel like a continuous struggle for students to gain the level of success that they aim for - however output is celebrated in small and large scale successes throughout a class setting.

Meredith White, Gwinnett County Public Schools, GA

Saturday, January 23 @ 10:00 a.m.–12:00 p.m.

This virtual workshop will provide teachers with Meredith's favorite hybrid/virtual teaching technology tools. Said tools, in the context of proficiency-based teaching, will be framed within the modes of communication as well as lesson planning, grading, and district/school/department collaboration. Don't come for the latest, greatest, teacher shiny object; come to see how one teacher is navigating the world of hybrid/virtual
